INSTRUCTION OR EDUCATION.

"The Schoolmaster," says Lord Cromer in his last report, "is abroad." If y a Jagoste st Jagost, and Molière in his "Quack Doctor" more a good many years ago. The quack doctor is well nigh dead, even the quack plantacien is dying, but the schoolmaster (the quack and the honest man) is still "abroad." The dangers of quack drags and of quack doctors are so glaing, we feel 'the smart so nearly, that their day is short. They stand condemsed by the very loudness of their voice; but the pretanded schoolmaster types in softer and more insidious tones. Who shall distinguish between the true and the false—"blind mouths that scarce themselves know to hold a sheephook! For the philoschool yellow the pretand and the standard of the report in full in today's issue. A persuad of the report in full in today's issue. A persuad of the report in full in today's issue. A persuad of the report brings to mind a recent article in the Prais" "Figaro" entitled "L'Usins britanique," from the pen of the Baron Fierre de Coubertin. "The British Factory" is a title which naturally suggests a discussion of labour questions; but the singunous reader who may have begun his persuad of this particular article under the inflence of the stream of the proportine of the present of the proportine of and sometime Headmaster, successively, of Clifton and Rugby. Not to many men is it given to preside over two of our greet public schools, and that reasonalone would selfne to command wery special attention to what Dr. Pervital may have to say. The ex-Headmaster complained of the poverty of the intellectual results attained by the English public schools, and declared himself convinced of the necessity of a total reform of the system of instruction which at present prevails in them. To put the case shortly, Dr. Pervital thinks that too much care the state of the prevail of the state of the season of the system of not at all. M. de Conbertin has the root of the matter in him, and he sees clearly that Tho-mas Arnold, to whom he pays an eloquest tribute of admiration, was right in regarding the supreme end of public school life to be, as the French would put it, not Finstruction, but Idducation. Arnold, says M. de Coubertin, evolved out of a state of chaos "une usine de force sociale"— a factory of social energy, which energy was to be used in the service of the nation and the Remirks Empire.

If we are not much mistaken, this Frenchman has "touched the spot." In a masterly passage he describes how the "grand pédague" "created school in the image of society, and made school hife the first chapter in social made school hife the first chapter in social and made school life the first chapter in social life.* M. de Coubertin sees clearly the great gulf which divides the English from the Co-tinestal school. The English from the Co-tinestal school is merely a cramming abop. Why I What is the difference? The difference is that the English system teaches responsibility—the other does not. An English public school, with its various out-lets for energy, its games, its debating society and other societies, its school magazine, and lets for energy, its games, its debating society and other societies, its school magazine, and its large liberty within reasonable limits, gives a lad a foretaste of the part les will play on the larger stage of its, and teaches him to play it. Above all, there is that peculiarly English institution, the prefetorial, or monitorial, system which, in return for certain privileges, makes the bask boys of proved authority and character answerable for the good conduct and the welfare of their juniors. "I should be very sorry," says M. de Coudertin, "for the Englishman who "should be bland enough not to perceive that "sugh institution." says M. de Coubertin, "for the Englishman who "should be blind enough not to perceive that "such institutions are not only the glory ot his "such institutions are not only the glory ot his "school system, but form one of the founds "dinos of his prosperity." Such an aducation, when applied to those espable of receiving it—and to those who are incapable of receiving all education must be useless—is, as he admirably patts it, "an apprentisage de liberté." That is not to say that no improvement is possible in matters of detail; indeed, it is obvious that headmasters must be constantly on the watch for weak spots in the system, as revealed to them in the ever-shift-ine light of social and intellectad progress.

Tondon, 7th January,
Port Arthur has fallen, and so have Kussian Stocks—had it not been for the efforts of interested parties Russian hours would now be below 90. There were reports on 'Change this morning to the effect that the coming loan of $25,000,000, mentioned in our last, is to be postponed; there is no doubt that the financial strain is making useff severely telt, and if the struggle in the Par East so continued much longer, the resources of more than one of the Posters will be required to prevent a serious falling away from present prices. The latest news as to the coming issue is to the effect that Russian financial authorities have decided to reduce the amount asked for in Germany to 216,000,000 — no doubt at the instigation to reduce the amount saked for in Germany to £16,500,000 — no doubt at the instigation of those who have undertaken the burden of inding the money. The beit to the underwitzer is a substantial use, namely 4½, commission, in other words, they get the stock, which is vill be remembered carries interest at 4½, a199, the issue price being 95. As regards the prospects of peace, we are sasured that these are better to-day than they have been for some weeks past. The Russian people want an homorable peace and are beginning to make themselves beard in extrust. France is moving heaven and earth to help them to this end. an honorable peace and are beginning to make themselves heard in earnest. France is moving heaven and earth to help them to this end, and all the other great. Powers are ready to tend a helping hand, so if the various Rossian factions can only settle their differences it will not be long before the last gun in Manchurria is fred. The merkets since the New Year have been somewhat disappointing. Dealers had one and all made up their minds we were to see a good recovery all round, and a large number that backed their optimosa by buying stock during the last account of the year. This professional speculative buying is in itself a weak factor when outside business is on so small a scale as it has been of late. Another point tending to check any upward movement is the fact that Germany was a heavy seller during the early part of the weak of speculative stocks in general and Maffiers in particular. This may be accounted for by the feeling in Bertin as to the orthonounig issue of Russian shock referred to above. "The Drink Question in Egypt."

Now I have been thinking, since living in Egypt, that the country is fortunate in having no serious problem in, that direction to grapple with. That it is not, so far, an urgent question is admitted in the address referred to, for the speaker expressly stated that crime resulting from drunkenness is so infrequent as not to be separately tabulated in criminal statistics—a very satisfactory state of affairs indeed. Why then bring the question into promunence at the present time!

The answer to this was that one should take warning by Northern Europe, and, by the adoption of preventive measures, guard against a similar state of things in Egypt coming about. Methods to insure this were suggested and here it is that important considerations

It needs but a short residence in Egypt to st casual observer that ex convince the most casual observer tract excess in drinking here and in England are two quite different things, and that while in Great Britain the evil is one with which it is difficult to cope, in Egypt, if you could eliminate one or two drinking sections and the immoral classes, there would be little ground for the temperance reformer to work on.

temperance reformer to work on.

This, I think, is mainly to be attributed to the lar greater facilities that people in this country possess for purchaseing problems that not total absence of the public home bar, where a take appetite and resulting its induced by the sale of inferior and adultions total absence of the public home bar, where a take appetite and resulting its induced by the sale of inferior and adultions it liquor.

No doubt inferior theory is very fortunally

No deabt inferior is uper is very often sold in Egypt, but the opportunities for purchasing small quantities of, say, the best Scotch whickies and Continental brandles at respectable grocery and provision stores; and of consuming wme, beer, and spirits under reasonable conditions, must greatly toud to keep doon the drunkenness that would, I teel stre, ensue if English liceusing laws and bracer's control of the treedom given in this country, and public houses replaced the open are called the open are c houses replaced the open-air cates.

It somewhat amused me to notice in passing It somewhat amused me to notice in passing the wandow of a biguedness stationer's shop a group of bottles or brandy marked "Uccasion, P.T. 10," although it's a good an illustration of the facilities offered for the purchase of slacoholic luquors as one could wish to find. Yet one seldom, if 'Ver, sees a drunken man in the streets of Alexandria.

So in the advocacy of temperate habits out here, there does not appear to be the need of notireity the principle of total abstinence that is, in so many cases in England, the only real cure for the epil of intemperate. Nor shad the temperate man who is not a total abstainer be the mark for the temperance reformer.

In saying this I am dealing with the ques-tion from an abstract and general, rather than an individual point of view, entirely omitting the very most point as to whether a moderate consumption of alcohol is, or is not, harmful to also the constitution. Possibly it is harmful to some,

UNDER THE MOSQUITO NET,

"As I large a thinkyage."

Ingoldaly,
In the first number of the new publication, "trient and Occident," a short notice of which appeared in the "Guestle" a few days ago, there was printed an abstance of an address given on "The Drink Question in Rgypt."

Now I have been thinking, since living in Egypt, that the country is fortunate in having in serious problem in that direction to grapple with. That it is not, so far, an urgent question is admitted in the address referred to, for the speaker expressly stated that crime resulting from drunkenness is so infrequent as not to be separately tabulated in criminal of the control of the speaker of the results of the control of the con of tectotal literature just now, wound no rities fany, real good.

As regards the natives, the question stands on an entirely different footing. While such a powerful body as the Uhared of England Temperance. Society uphoids the direction moderate use of alcoholic liquors, the direction on the other hand, positively ratifs then, on the other hand, positively ratifs then, use by all Mohamelans, and it alcohol their religion does not assection the direction of th sake," and they might find themselves "on the horns of a daming."

Like all great questions, what is known as the temperance one wants looking at from more than one point of view, and not only as regards drink is temperance necessary, but equally in respect to esting, smoking, and other things that are carried to excess by many people who are immaculate on one given point. Sometimes a tendency is shown to

An immoderate smoker is sometimes a total abstainer, and vice-versa; a glutton is sometimes neither of these, and a moderate man in all three may be immoderate in many another all three may be immoderate in many another way. The beat course to sleer is to be strictly moderate in the use of all things that go to make up the sum total of our dairy ife. It requires a well-balanced mind, and a certain amount of experience, before one can do this, but it is an end eminently desirable of attainment, and worthy of making an effort to reach.

The "Maichester Guardian," in its review of the Inc. 12, extou, trade in 1994, makes the following remarks on Egyptian outton — The variations in the price of Egyptian outton — The variations in the price of Egyptian outton — The variations in the price of Egyptian outton, and we have seen 'that' the highest prices of the season in both 'kinds' week' opticident. The differences in the relation of pit to the other have been nevertheless pranarkelsle. Good fair Egyptian opened the 'year' at 81H1, and on February 2, the highest point of the year, the difference between middling American and good fair Egyptian was at trifle more than 14d. The Egyptian crop of 1904-5, seems likely to be something of a disappointment. The previous crop was 6,508,947 cautars, and with a stock in Alexandria-con Anguest 16 4'09,000 cautars and good secounts of the new crop low prices seemed probable. The estimates, however, have dropped gradually from containing the 7,000,000 cantars to kearly $600,000, and with /the Liverpiol market largey blow the parity of Alexandria there has been meeting like a shortage of the staple. The defention of cotton by Egyptian specialton has been assigned in some quarters as the chief cakes of the high prices, and a further resort to short time by spinners is suggested. This five of Egyptian cotton has naturally discreased, and were it not that some of the spinners of the obmoore counts of Egyptian have been able to turn to American counts the particular brashlo the industry would have been in a very difficult position. Prices of Egyptian cotton have, or course, fallen in correspondence with American, and though during November they were usually quoted in Liverpool, as 'nominal,' Decemer brought a more definite condition, fuduced, perhaps, by a more moderate demand. And while on the call and the condition, fuduced, parking, or the standard condition, fuduced, parking, or the standard condition, fuduced, parking on the standard condition, fuduced, and the condition fuduced. There will be next year, of course, various small subsidiary supplies due to the energy of the British and other cotton-growing associations, and these too, form an incalculable factor in the general situation.

LGYPTIAN AND OTHER VERSES.

MR. COOKSON'S POEMS.

Egypt has inspired the best of the poems in this little book, and our readers will not we hope, blane us if we confine ourselves has far as possible, in this review, to verses that deal with things which we all have seen and know. The Sphinx, the Nile, the sights and sounded of Egypt, are all familiar to us, and wrise that makes them its subject has a more geheral interest. And some of Mr. Cookson's verse is very good, though there is a certain timidity in handling metres apparent in parts of the Egyptian Scient and in much of the rest of the book. To begin with criticism of the enforcement of the continuous of t Gritics will irreverently quote hymns or Dector Watta.

With the sonnets we are on quite different ground. They are all well written from the metrical point of view and some of them, not-bly. "The Garden in the Desert." "An Egyptian Night," and "Evening by the Niel," show, with great descriptive power and good workmanchly, the feeling of the artist who will not be satisfied with any but the only appropriate word and burnes.

'Do you Still urge the black felouka's hull, freighted' roads hadly, for all the emphasis in the world will never turn a troches into an iambus. Now for the other versoy, the three lyrics for music are well written, and 'Gloep, sleep, my darling, sleep' write. Roses, road and white' are really graceful songs, but the verses in the short quarani sail through the book are not strong, and reveal the fact that if you choose this metre you must be almost timerorsly careful in your choice of subject and your phrasing; otherwise your critics will irreverently quote hymns or Doctor Watta.

We have already reviewed Mr. Noel Rawnsley's new work, "The Resurrection of Oldest Exprpt," but we omitted from our critique the very interesting story of the finding of an invers statestic bearing the carbonehoe of Klufe, the Cheops who built the Great Pyramid, and rulest the land with a security set the beginning of the fourth century betore the Christian era. Unfortunisticity the beed was limited similarity and for a long time at the efforts of the searchers were vain. SECOND ANNUAL REPORT

If an institution is privileged from its birth to se the entimension of generous hierarchics, it may be intend that its future will at least be interesting; if the institution, as it grows older, earns the tional privilege of profoking the attention of watchful enties, it may be assumed that it is alive and doing its work in the world. In the full belief that Victoria Online: is not only alive but growing stronger the coolinater presents the second annual report to the committee, the members of which, he is persuaded, all agree with him in holding that, while the functions will agree with him in noming that, while the indictions of criticism and enthusiasm are different enough, the proxime of each of the same, and that since both proximeably are exercised in the interests of the school, it is not to its advantage to be derived of the

it will be remembered that the Consultace, en-sured by the results of be first avar's work, leaded to build an upper story for arders, and that arrangement with the Municipality of Alexandria red of the playground was to be lowered. In mence of these improvements and alterations the of October had been fixed as the earliest day or 15th of October had begen fixed as the carliest day on which the school could, be re-opened. As that date drow close, it was thought by many that neither the budding nor the playground would be ready. The upper story did not present a hopeful appearance, the playground had been converted into a somewhat com-plexed system of light railways, the front door lung describes in the contract of the contract of the conplotted system of light railways, the front door long depectedly in midsair and the only cutrance to the electrons was by escalade, tisodwill, however, did fonders. Mr. Borg, the capable representative of Messrs, McCulra and Derling, proceed on the work upstairs, by October 15th Messrs. Almagia were so obliging as on October 15th Messrs. Almagia were so obliging as to drive a cutting which made it possible to enter is now full, profitable as it always is to look back upon the experience and lessons of the past, it is even upon the experience and lessons of the past, 174-18 even more essential to look forward to the problems of the future. For these reasons the survey of the year must be brief. The work continued on the lines already laid down. A fourth form was constituted, and it should here be stated for the benefit of those to whom English nomenclature is unfamiliar that the word "form or bench corresponds to the expression "year" in use at the primary and secondary schools of the Egyptian Government. The first form is accordingly the lowest, and not the highest in the school.

SCHOOL ORGANISATION

To these four forms it is intended to add anothers for forms it is intended to add anothers for by year, as the age of the pupils increases and ultimately a course shall have been provided which will give efficient instruction to boys between the ages of seven and eighteen years. With four classes it was possible to attempt a somewhat note causes it was possible to attempt a sometime in knowledge between boys in the first and fourth form will best begrasped by a reference to the scheme (p. 23) which presents in tabular form a conspectus of the work done throughout the school. From a very humble beginning in the first form, (in which however it is claimed that solid foundations are laid, and in which boys should if possible begin their school life) the work reaches a quite respectable level in the fourth form. The subjects taught included all those of last form. The subjects taught included all those of last year with the addition of a course of elementary practical Geometry successfully undertaken by Mr Laxike. In addition to the useful monthly examinations which have become a feature of the school work, a general examination of the whole school was held in the second week of July, been informed that it would be impossible for an Eggib-housing to take a useful part in the teaching and management of a boys' school in Egypt, is glad the be aboly to state that this has not been his experience.

In last year sepert a narrative was given of the excellent work of G. Valassopoulo, M. Antonius, and the state of the school year. It is not fow proposed to Nire, P. Stein, R. Tuby in the III. Form, and of J. testell a stale which must of necessity to some extent of the excellent work of S. Such a rectain hight existy owney a some work of the proposed to Nire, P. Stein, R. Tuby in the III. Form, and of J. Lascaridis in the II. Form, Solid work was also done the proposed to the step of the proposed to Nire and the proposed to N Returning to the examinations of last summer La sale which must of necessity to some extent Lascarnius in the Ir. Form. Some who were not so fortunate as to win prizes and Mr. Lowlek, who once more undertook the duties an impression of school life with all its manifold among these may be mentioned in the fourth form of the same, but ever varying form S. Cheeri and R. Frangi; and in the third form detail from day to day. Moreover since the school J. Tuby, A. G. Paslis and E. Cordahi, all of whom materially assisted by two of the senior boys, T. Cheeri and the contraction of the senior boys, T. Cheeri and E. Cordahi, all of whom orked steadily throughout the year. On the whol the results obtained were very encouraging to the masters. In French the boys did particularly well under M. Dumont whose methods and discipline have won the approval of those most competent to judge. In English the progress of almost all the boys was (it is no exaggeration to say) astonishing. In Mathematics History and Geography satisfactory results were obtained and in Drawing some good work was done for Mr Mustard who had taken much trouble in teaching thi important subject. Of the boys'

PROFICIENCY IN ARABIC.

the headmaster is not yet qualified to speak. It is therefore with all the more satisfaction that he is able to report that in the opinion of Sheikh Abdul Aziz Shawish, who is now assisting the Professors of Arabic at Oxford, the standard reached in Arabic is remarkably good, especially in consideration of the fact that to so many of the boys Arabic is a foreign tongue. The of the boys Arabic is a foreign tongue. The aster wishes to take this opportunity of thanking Sheikh Mohammed Hamed, who has succeeded not only i Sheikh Mohammed Hamed, who has succeeded not only in teaching those to whom Arabic is their mother tongue but also in inspiring others, to whom it is an exceedingly difficult aud at first even a repellent language, with a desire to advance beyond the threshold. The thanks of the Committee are also due in an especial degree to Sheikh Abdul Aziz Shawish for his kindness in putting the boys of the third and fourth forms through searching oral examination

PRIVATE READING.

As supplementary to work in school, which is a sarily restricted in its scope, everything possible necessary restricted in its scope, everything possible has been done to encourage the private grading of the pupils. However much a master may help a boy by his teaching, the boy, if 'properly directed, gan_do much more for himself. But in order to read profitable books it is necessary to have access to a library. Victoria Collider is still in . Its infancy, and a school library does not yet exist. Something however in the way of creating one has been done by the boys thems and something has been done by their friends. last year's report mention was made of a lending library, rendered possible in the first instance by gifts from the National Bank and Mr. Alderson. This year the headmaster has the pleasure to record further gifts and donations. The Earl of Meath, to whom the school is also indebted for a Howard Vincent Map and a dummy ritle, very kindly presented a copy of Milner's England in Egypt, and among other gifts there were £5 from an anonymous donor and £10 from Dr. Morrison, who in this and in other ways has proved a very generous friend to the school. The lending library now numbers over 200 volumes and possesses many useful books of reference. It is pleasant to be able to state that the latter are in consterequisition, and it is to be hoped that it may possible some day to add to their number.

n good company, long school hours defeat their own boject. Boys, discouraged by the teaching of lessons which seem to have no end, allow their attention to wander in school, while out of doors they lose their natural aptitude for play and exercise. It has been said of the Japanese soldier, that when he is not natural aptitude for pasy and exercise. It has been said of the Japanese soldier, that when he is not energetically and cheerfully at work, he is energetically and cheerfully at play. This is an ideal which with some other maply virtues we may well borrow from that gallant people. The very important work of supervision again fell principally upon Mr. Mustard and Mr. Lowick, who once more undertook the duties and A. Verny, who developed into two and A. Verny, who developed into two snart corporats. The two companies, as last year, had the honour of being inspected by the Earl of Meath, who with Lady Meath yeated the school in the Spring, It was encouraging to the instructors to be informed that since the last inspection there had been a very marked improvement. The thanks of the Committee are due to Mr. Mustard and Mr. Lowick not only for acting as drill instructors, but also for undertaking again the supervision of the playground and the omnibus, duties which, entailing no little sacrifice of personal comfort have contributed very much to the efficiency of th

The games, that important department of a boy's life, have grown into a serious institution. Hockey found its proper place in the season which intervenes between football and cricket, though these two games as in England had the larger number of partisans. At football the school XI, not flying at the highest game, escaped defeat, and at cricket a new departure was made. Thanks to the kindness of the Alexandria C. C. represented by its captain Mr. T. H. Marsden, and its Hon. Secretary Mr. F. G. Freeman, the boys were able to play once a fortnight on the excellent ground belonging to the Club—a privilege which they thoroughly appreciated. Mr. Marsden and Mr. Freeman did so much to make the cricket of the school a success that the warmest thanks of all are due to them and also to another enthusiastic member of the Club, Mr. P. W. Carver, who presented the school with £20 to be devoted to games. The money has been spent on two asyndat pitches, which it will be possible to use all the year round. The balance which remains will also be laid out on improvements in the playground, possibly in the purchase of iron stanchions and a rope to enclose the football ground and mark out a ru

SOME INCIDENTS.

Although it has not been thought necessary cribe at length the routine of the school year, would not be right to pass over without mention the incidents which most strike the imagination of the boys. To the visit of Lord and Lady Meath allusion has already been made. The school was also honoured accompanied on this occasion by Mr. and Mrs. Gould, and received on behalf of the Committee by Mr. Alderson, Mr. Kingham and Mr. Preston. The visit was especially interesting to everyone as this was the first occasion on which Lady Cromer had had the opportunity of seeing the school, since the foundation stone was laid. Lord Cromer as usual made a very close inspection of the boys and of the buildings. close inspection of the boys and of the buildings. His criticisms were brief and to the point. "The boys," he said, "looked happy and the playground bare." The headmaster has reason to believe that Lord Cromer was pleased with the intelligence as well Lord Cromer was pleased with the intelligence as well as the appearance of the boys and he may perhap be allowed to repeat that the Committee has good reason to be grateful for the interest which Lord Cromer has constantly shown in the school. Again and again he has been assured by parents that to them there is no better guarantee of the usefulness of the school than the visits of Lord Cromer and his reference to the school in his annual Reports.

THE KINDERGARTEN

It must not be supposed that the headmaster speaking of the success of the school so far is unaward of the weaknesses which exist. But with the mean at the disposal of the Committee everything possible has been done. The Kindergarten recommended las year has been built and the circular announcing it proposed establishment has had a most encoura Out of school the boys had their time well in gresponse. It is not, however, -yet certain whether occupied with games and drill—too much time it has it will be possible to open the Kindergarten at all been complained by some. But in the opinion of the headmaster, who on this subject errs, if error it be, applicants are many little girls (the question immediately arises to what school can they go when they hav passed the Kindergarten age l), and secondly becaus number 54 and the building intended for the Kindergarter provides the only classroom into which it is possible to overflow. To what has this success been due Partly to the encouragement and support to which reference has already been made, partly to the admir able position of the school by the sea, to the wel arranged classrooms and spacious playground (which the Committee has so wisely enclosed), and partly to the fact that English education for boys and girls is alled for throughout the country with no uncerta voice. For two years the masters have worked hard and cheerfully for the good of the school. The future is not in their hands. In the brief sketch which follows an attempt has been made to show where in the opinion of the headmaster this future lies.
